Without the data points it will near impossible to know if a person comes from a certain group of people.

08:55:27 From Taylor Wolters to Everyone:

I dont think it would hurt to collect more data. Data is good.

08:55:37 From BenjaminRobertson to Everyone:

This can be helpful in understanding he type of care that can be provided

08:55:50 From BenjaminRobertson to Everyone:

We can protect the data more

08:57:02 From Philecia Wilson to Everyone:

Philecia Wilson, FSS

08:57:12 From Taylor Wolters to Everyone:

So the field in HMIS will still be there right? So we can have record of someones gender identity to know how to appropriately address them ?

08:57:33 From EdinSabanovic to Everyone:

correct

09:04:15 From Tiffany Adams to Everyone:

Re the gender question: Leading with client choice, I think ensuring there are options for people to identify the way they choose is a key factor. It could be our limitations put on clients, more than asking the question. Additionally, not answering the question shouldn't impact the service provision and it's important to explain, to the client, the reason for the question (quality data, transparency, improved services, funding, etc.,)

09:17:33 From BenjaminRobertson to Everyone:

Thanks
